Dear PCMs and Mentors,

This week sees our trainees focus on the principles of effective teaching and allows them to focus on taking an increased level of responsibility for the planning and delivery of high quality lessons. Mentors can support our trainees by breaking down their own use of key principles of instruction, engaging in dialogue around what best evidences their progress so far as the trainee continues to collate this information on Abyasa.

Best wishes,

The St Mary's Partnership Team

Week 7: 26th February to 1st March

Weekly theme: The focus for this week is a consideration of how teachers avoid overloading working memory and, in doing so, plan effective lessons. Trainees will address this area of focus by discussing aspects of planning, teaching and learning in their weekly training meeting, observing expert colleagues and receiving feedback on their own teaching practice. They should be able to confidently talk about this area of their practice and how it is informed by the expertise in their setting as well as their own learning in previous aspects of their training.

Research: Rosenshine (2012) provides the research focus for this week in their review of effective principles for instruction. Trainees will be prompted to reflect with their mentor on the aspects of this literature they see in practice and how this informs their approach to behaviour management in the classroom. The attached research summary serves to support mentors in discussing this with their trainees.
